Legionaires Interested In Post War Pictures.

One of the most inspiring stories that has come out of the war is that of "Monk Eastman" a New York gangster, notorious throughout the country, whose tale has been immortalized on the screen in Thomas H. Ince's "Skin Deep".

The "Monk" after a life of crime and a term in the penitentiary, suddenly dropped out of sight. The next hour of him was when Private William Delaney returned from France with the 10th Infantry, bringing a Victory Medal and an "excellent" service record. The "Monk" had enlisted under his real name and tried to atone under shell fire.

Governor Smith restored his citizenship and the "Monk" tried to go straight. Gangster enemies, finding he could no longer be used, shot him in cold blood on Christmas night three years ago.

His story suggested the thrilling melodrama "Skin Deep" which makes such a tremendous appeal for appreciation on the part of the nation of the services of American fighting men.

"Skin Deep" opens a two day engagement at the Gaiety starting tomorrow evening. Although the picture is highly melodramatic and it is a type of production that you can freely bring your children to see. Cheap sentimentalism has been religiously kept out of "Skin Deep". Crooks and police are ever present and guns flash, but there are no murders. There are penitentiaries but no eleventh-hour pardons.

No innocent girl is called upon to protect her honor. There is no white-haired mother of the escaped convict. Nobody's parentage is questioned. And yet, with this new style melodrama, Thomas H. Ince has produced some legitimate thrills seldom equalled on the stage.

Miss Anna Erickson came out from Chicago and visited her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Erickson over the weekend.

Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Williams and family of Yorkville called on Mrs. Edith Williams Sunday evening.

CORN SHOW TO BE HELD AT STATE UNIVERSITY

Urbana, Ill., Dec. 27.—"Will prize winning show corn outyield the corn which was not awarded a ribbon?" is the question for the farmer to select two types of corn, one a higher type than the other, out of his own seed?

Is there any correlation between types of corn, disease resistance, and yield of corn in the field? These and many other equally important questions will be asked at the Third Annual Corn Show at the University of Illinois, January 22 to 27.

In addition to the large number of samples of corn on display in the various classes, there will be an extensive educational exhibit dealing with the corn question listed above. In this exhibit will be graphically displayed the results of many experiments conducted at the University of Illinois in the study of the root rot of corn. Remnants of samples of show corn from the Utility Corn Show of last year, together with data as to their production and actual samples of corn they produced, will make up another feature of the show. These samples and many others were tested out in different sections of the state and the data thus secured will be of great value to the farmer who is interested in bettering his seed corn and in finding a type of seed which is exhibiting resistance to the root rot and therefore producing more sound marketable corn per acre than is some other kind.

The chief feature of the corn show will be the display on Wednesday, January 24, of the growing seedling from each of the prospective tender lots of corn. The Utility Score Card which will be used in placing this corn, requires such a germination test. For the purpose of this score, 100 kernels will be removed from each tender sample and that portion of the score dealing with vigor of germination and disease condition will be determined by the performance of the germinator. No farmer who is interested in studying his seed corn and in ascertaining what other farmers are finding out as well as getting the latest experimental evidence, on this important question, can afford to miss this corn show if it is at all possible to attend. In order to get the most out of the show, he should have a sample of his own there to study and compare. All corn should be in Urbana not later than January 19.

Problem Before All.

The common problem, yours, mine, everybody's, is not to fancy what were fair in life, provided it could be—but first find what may be then find how to make it fair up to our means.—Browning.
